

2011 Report to the Community

The Dougy Center
The National Center for Grieving Children & Families

30 years of hope and healing

In 1982, 13-year-old Dougy Turno was facing his own death from brain cancer. Frustrated that no one wanted to talk to him about dying, he reached out to other children in his hospital ward and helped them to open up about their fears. Thirty years later, Dougy's gentle spirit lives on at The Dougy Center. More than 30,000 grieving children and their families have walked through our doors to find comfort, support and healing. Our unique approach, using peer support to help people discover their own way through grief, has made us a world-wide leader in the field. With your support, we will continue our important mission for the next 30 years and beyond.

Our reach in 2011

634 children, teens and young adults attended bi-weekly support groups, while 402 parents and adult caregivers attended their own concurrent groups through Dougy Center programs in Portland, Hillsboro and Canby.

The Dougy Center led 62 trainings and interventions, attended by more than 2,500 people. Several of the trainings, conducted in Japan and in the U.S., supported Japanese health care professionals working with children and families following the devastating tsunami.

53,683 people searched for grief support resources on The Dougy Center's website.

The Dougy Center staff took 447 telephone calls from people in crisis or seeking referrals.

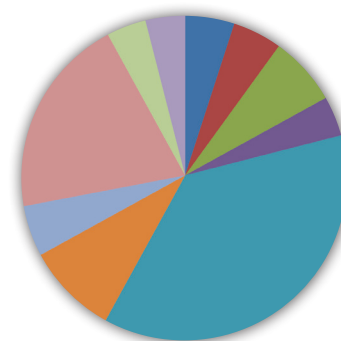

491 children and their families were introduced to The Dougy Center at family orientation sessions.

18,146 books and other resources were purchased through The Dougy Center's online bookstore.

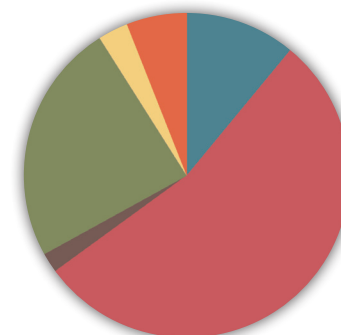

17,481 volunteer hours were contributed by 182 group facilitators to support The Dougy Center's peer group programs.
