Pathways
A PROGRAM OF DOUGY CENTER

What is Pathways?

Pathways offers peer support groups for children, teens, and their adults when a family member is living with an advanced serious illness, which is a disease that has been diagnosed as incurable. Pathways consists of a group for children, a group for teens, a group for adult caregivers, and a group for the adults diagnosed with an advanced serious illness. All groups meet at the same time so families can come together. Groups are ongoing and you can join any time.

Who can join a Dougy Center Pathways group?

Children and teens who have a parent or sibling who has been diagnosed with an advanced serious illness with a prognosis of three months to three years are invited to participate in the Pathways groups, as well as their adults.

What if it's a grandparent or other family member that has been diagnosed, can we participate?

Please contact a Pathways Coordinator if your child's grandparent is living with you full time and has been diagnosed with an advanced serious illness to determine if Pathways is appropriate for your family, 503-775-5683 or pathways@dougy.org.

When is the right time for our family to join a Pathways group?

Many of our families access support for months or even years. While it can be hard to know when to join, most families tell us they wish they had joined sooner. If you or your family member has been diagnosed with an advanced serious illness — including late-stage cancer, ALS, or advanced neurological disease, among others — and have a prognosis of three or more months, Pathways offers support for you and your family. Having support earlier on the path can help you and your children feel less alone — even as your family member might continue to seek treatments, medical care, and maintain hope.

What if my kids don't know that their person has been diagnosed with an illness that will significantly shorten their life? Can they still attend?

Yes. Often adults find it difficult to find the words to start these challenging conversations with their children. Talking with the other adults in the peer support group and the Pathways Group Coordinators can bring some ease to these tough conversations. Contact a Pathways Coordinator at 503-775-5683 or pathways@dougy.org for more information.

What happens in a Pathways peer support group?

Groups for children and teens involve discussion, play, and activities where they can share with peers who are having similar experiences. Here they learn tools for coping while in a supportive environment. Adult groups offer facilitated conversations about living with an advanced serious illness themselves or within their family. Through playing, talking, and listening, your family will find understanding, connection, and community.

Does everyone in the family have to participate?

Dougy Center's mission is to provide peer support to children and teens who have a parent or sibling living with an advanced serious illness or are grieving a death. A child or teen must be participating for the adults in the family to attend groups. The Pathways Coordinator can help direct you to other resources if your child(ren) choose not to participate. Adult groups at Dougy Center are optional, however most adults find the group supportive and helpful. Adults who choose not to participate must remain onsite for liability, medical, and safety reasons.

What do you offer for a young adult who has a family member living with an advanced serious illness?

A Pathways young adult support group is not available at this time. Young adults who have a family member living with an advanced serious illness are invited to attend the adult caregiver group. Contact the Pathways Coordinator at pathways@dougy.org or 503-775-5683 to determine if Pathways could be a possible support for you.

Where and how often do the Pathways groups meet?

Pathways support groups meet for 1.5 hours in-person every other week. The groups take place at our Southeast Portland location. Dougy Center does not have a Pathways virtual group or meet at other locations at this time.

Does Dougy Center charge for the peer support group?

The Pathways program, like all Dougy Center programs, is provided at no cost to your family. We are committed to providing services without any additional financial burden to families.

How do I sign up for the group?

To learn more about Pathways or sign up for a group contact Dougy Center at 503-775-5683 or email pathways@dougy.org.

Do we have to wait long before we can attend a group?

The Pathways Coordinator will discuss the group with you and send forms to complete prior to attending the group. Once the forms are received by the coordinator, your family can participate in the next Pathways group.

Does Dougy Center have additional Pathways resources?

Yes! The Pathways Coordinator has additional resources that your family may find helpful. Activities for children and teens, tip sheets for adults, book lists, podcast, and other resources can be found on the Dougy Center website, dougy.org/pathwaysresources. Dougy Center offers peer support groups, but not counseling services. Referrals to therapists specializing in support through serious illness are available upon request.

Does Dougy Center offer the Pathways group in Spanish?

The Pathways group is not available in a Spanish speaking format at this time. Program staff who speak Spanish are available for questions and there are resources available in Spanish for before and after a death on our website, dougy.org/recursos. Please contact Dougy Center at 503-775-5683 for more information.

What happens after the death?

Families are invited to attend one more Pathways group after the death to share and say goodbye to their peers. Information regarding the bereavement groups will be sent to a family after closing from Pathways. Families then decide when they are ready to participate in a bereavement group.
