

People Who Like Me

For Teachers and Caregivers:

Grief can feel really lonely. This activity helps children remember there are people who care about them. Invite children to draw pictures of people who like them. They can draw as many people as they want. Help children label each picture with who the person is (“My grandma”). You can also ask them follow-up questions such as: “What do they like about you?” “What do you like to do with them?” “What would you say to them if they were here right now?”
